The production of a George Bernard Shaw play in New York is always an event of importance in the theatrical season, but the initial performance in America of his comedy "Getting Married" last night at the Booth Theatre claimed more than usual attention. The reason for this was the distinguished cast chosen William Paversham for its presentamuch, and the audience last night found that they had not been betrayed. The play deals humorously with all the phases of the marriage question, from the perplexing problems which beset young lovers through the conditions and Cailing Samuel Gompers "the political business agent of the free trade Democratic party." Thomas Rock, business agent of District Council No. 1 of the International Pavers Union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, charged last night that Gompers in his speech at the Hippodrome Sunday night had not been fair or truthful about Mr. Hughes's record.
